On May 12, 2011, nine members of the SDDS Oral Health Committee met at SDDS Headquarters to judge entries for the 2011 Children’s Dental Health Month Creative Contest. This year’s contest format was somewhat different from that of previous years, in that each local component had the option of hosting its own creative contest in addition to the New York State Dental Association’s statewide contest. For the SDDS and RCDS contest, Brooklyn and Staten Island preschool, elementary and high school students were invited to submit a self-created book cover featuring an educational dental health theme such as brushing, flossing, nutrition, etc. Participants were required to submit their entries on paper or poster board no larger than 11” x 17” and were free to utilize traditional media, i.e. paint, colored pencil, crayons, etc. and/or computer-generated art. Of the 1000-plus entries received, the judges selected 1st, 2nd and 3rd place winners in seven categories ranging from preschool through 12th grade. The submissions were judged on educational value and creativity, both of which were in abundance. Winners in each category will be awarded US savings bonds for their hard work: First place winners will receive $100 savings bond, second place will receive $75 savings bond and third place will receive $50 savings bond.

Congratulations to the winners and a big thank you to all the students and teachers who participated and to the SDDS members who reviewed the numerous submissions. Their combined efforts helped make this year’s CDHM creative contest a resounding success!

VENUE CHANGE - Gargiulo’s Restaurant, Brooklyn, NY

Friday, June 3, 2011
9:00 AM - 12:00 NOON  MCEU - 2 HOURS

Title: “A New Paradigm Shift in Esthetic-Treatment Planning”

Clinician: Leonid Rubinov, D.D.S., Ph.D.
Clinical Assistant Professor, Advanced Programs for International Dentists,
New York University College of Dentistry

Synopsis:
This course will provide a whole new outlook on dentistry and will describe a new interdisciplinary approach to the diagnosis and treatment planning of full mouth rehabilitation cases with pre-existing malocclusions and TMJ disorders. It will also illustrate the need for interdisciplinary diagnosis, which leads to proper sequencing of future treatment to solve several of the esthetic and functional dilemmas dentists often face. Participants will learn the logical thought process used for treatment planning and the clinical decision-making process that will assist in determining when treatment goals have been met. A new set of priorities in the diagnosis of full mouth rehabilitation cases will be determined. This will demonstrate why evaluation of a patient’s facial beauty, proper facial balance and proportions are paramount for esthetic treatment planning.

Upon successful completion of this course attendees will learn a new interdisciplinary approach to treatment planning of esthetic rehabilitation cases. Participants will learn why it is so important to evaluate a patient’s facial appearance, along with proper skeletal and dental orthopedic relationship between their jaws and teeth. These assessments will allow for a correct diagnosis and treatment plan of reconstruction cases.

CONTINUING EDUCATION COURSE #2011-20
VENUE CHANGE - SDDS Headquarters, Brooklyn, NY

Thursday, June 23, 2011
7 PM - 9 PM  MCEU - 2 HOURS

Title: “Stem Cells: Sources, Therapies and the Dental Professional”

Clinician: Gregory C. Chotkowski, D.M.D.
President, StemSave Inc.

Synopsis:
The emerging field of “personalized medicine” is a popular topic in the media and generally refers to new medical technologies derived from a patient’s own stem cells. Within the context of adult dental stem cells, recent findings and scientific research support the therapeutic use of the extremely potent mesenchymal stem cells found within the healthy pulp of deciduous and permanent teeth, as well as other accessible tissues harvested from within the oral cavity. Their use can be applied to a multitude of regenerative and personalized medical therapies. As clinical studies continue to advance in the coming years, it is widely accepted that in order to avoid autoimmune rejection from donor tissues -- while simultaneously maximizing on therapeutic efficacy -- stem cells will be used to generate individualized “patient specific” treatments. Within the field of dentistry, stem cells will be used for the regeneration of dentin and/or dental pulp, the creation of biologically viable scaffolds for the replacement of orofacial bone and cartilage and the partial or complete regeneration of defective salivary glands.

Upon successful completion of this course participants will learn the basic science of the different types of stem cells, the various available sources for recovery of adult stem cells from within and outside the oral cavity, the advantages and disadvantages of each source and the benefits of recovering and cryopreserving dental stem cells. Attendees will also learn the clinical relevance of recovering dental stem cells and the potential uses of dental stem cells and their role in regenerative therapies.
